Indigenous involvement in the Northern Gulf

The Northern Gulf Natural Resource Group (NGNRG) is a good example of a group that is integrating Indigenous needs for natural resource management (NRM) while still adhering to government guidelines and timeframes. The NGNRG have good Indigenous representation and support in the development of the regional NRM plan and in support of the regional NRM body. The group takes great pride in abiding by Indigenous protocols such as conducting the traditional Welcome to Country before a meeting commences. An Indigenous regional body office recently opened at Croydon and is servicing the needs of the local community. ### New staff at Fitzroy

Chantelle James and Trudy Baker are two new natural resource management (NRM) staff members in the Fitzroy Basin Association who will be involved in the National Action Plan for Salinity and Water Quality (NAPSWQ). Their role is to provide support for various stakeholders and work towards accomplishing the NRM targets and actions of the Central Queensland Strategy for Sustainability and relevant sub-regional NRM plans. Through increased involvement between regional groups and local governments, they hope to implement NRM solutions by working towards building viable communities. For further information, please contact Chantelle James at chantelle.james@fitzroyshire.qld.gov.au or Trudy Baker at trudy.baker@fitzroyshire.qld.gov.au
